Technical assistance/Troubleshooting

I'm using myCWT for the first time. Why can't I see my upcoming trips?

Upon accessing the app for the first time, it may take up to 30 minutes for upcoming trips to populate. The amount of time depends on the number of reservations per user. After 30 minutes, you may need to initiate a manual sync on your device.

Why is my completed trip still showing in the upcoming trips section of the app?

A trip moves to the past trips section approximately one full day after the last day of the trip. For example, if your trip ended on June 20, it will move to past trips on June 22.

Why didn't I receive my flight notification on myCWT mobile?

Flight update notifications start 48 hours before the flight's departure time. Please ensure notifications are turned on within the app.

- For iOS devices (iPhone/iPad):
 - Go to Settings > Notifications > locate myCWT and tap on it.
- Ensure Allow Notifications is enabled:
 - Enable and set one or more of the following to on:
 - Show in Notification Center.
 - Alert style (select banners or alerts).
 - Badge app icon.
 - Sounds.
 - View in lock screen.
- For Android and Kindle Fire devices:
 - To enable flight notifications, tap "Travel Notifications" from the "General" screen of the myCWT app.
 - Verify the following settings under the "Flight Notification" heading:
 - Notification display: Enabled.
 - Time before flight: Choose number of hours before flight.
 - Notification sound: On.
 - To receive an audio alert:
 - Verify that the box next to "Audio flight alert" is checked. If the box is empty, tap on it one time to check the box.

Flight notifications are enabled. Why am I not receiving alerts?

If flight data is missing or late, it is probably due to one of the following reasons:

- Airlines occasionally provide data on their respective websites but not to the flight-tracking industry.
- Some airlines do not provide actual gate departure or arrival times.
- Some airlines do not share their data.
- Budget and charter airlines tend not to share data or only share limited data, so the flight may not be listed until near the departure time.
- Some airlines—particularly carriers outside the U.S.—do not share any gate data with the flight-tracking industry.
- Gates and terminals often are not provided until approximately 60 minutes prior to departure.
- If you encounter longer delays or inaccurate information, please email us and include the following:
 - Airline, flight number and departure date.
 - The information that you expected to see.
 - The information that the app displayed.
